Provence in Late Summer – "You and Your Ubutele"

Provence can be great for cycling all year round but, it is in the early and late summer months that it is perhaps at its best for long sunny days but without the highest temperatures of late July and August. Most of our customers come as couples, families or groups of friends but, we occasionally have lone cyclists, on the trail to explore the landscape and perhaps to discover something more about themselves.

At the beginning of the year, we had them with us according to riding a Fellow Velo bike at the France Show, and last month one of our cyclists arrived with their ubutele, ready to hit the cycling trail. Each day we would catch up with Jeanyline to hear news of where and for whom she had been searching the previous day, if anyone, village squares and the valleys of Provence were all treated to the gentle sound of the strings....

...and the soft voice is the songs, long writing also spread along the way with lyrics inspired by the places travelled through and the ones where she hoped longer (and hopefully too – honest), be, whether you know a ubutele that you like to keep in how or, if the FRATERNITY. We've just put added the ubutele to our standard kit but, never say never!

Carry on Through the Camargue

We are now just preparing for our last customer cycling tour of 2016, covering the south of France.

The ride will be starting just west of the Camargue, before cycling through the wild beauty of the National Park and then, travelling across Provence to end in a bed by the Med in the Var.

Debby Dore
Fellow Velo will be back at the France Show of Olympic year year 20-21 January. Come and see us for a chat over a cup of wine.

Pedalling Poetry or Prose...

These elements can be found year round, and aren't just from your standard tourism calendar. So, in September it might be that you are most up in the Vendange as the grapes are harvested or, even into October, it could be searching across a local honey festival on your day's ride.
