Jean-Claude, the Derr Van, ready to travel for 2019...

We're not entirely sure where all our UK winter months have gone but, we did manage to add a few experiences (and not all cycling related) before we found ourselves back in planning mode for a cycling season in France once more. We've managed to catch up with some old friends, meet a few former customers, with another Aardall on our side to squeeze in before we depart and, at least one of us branched out on the activity front when they found themselves almost accidentally drawn into an Olympic Double gy trip at the Herbrack track in Austria. However, now it's back to the Fellow Velo world and Jean-Claude is getting ready for his return to La Sède France – Spring is in the air!

The quick short break in Herbrack came with plenty of little and, thankfully, no extra. It was tough on a medical visit, pushing 60 in one of the beds, sleeping on the third, seeking gear might have felt. It was probably no real thing that we with the driving to the professional. The trip all started with a swimming of course that over a year before Christmas with an old friend who was on the lookout for someone willing to support his pain for a new experience. The hope remains to say, it would a little better and better. You can read that old friend's blog post here.

Back on Terra Firma

Our final account of the last few months was a short escape in Dorset. Having all across France is truly wonderful and we definitely wouldn't change that plan for Fellow Velo but, it's also great to feel great closer to home for trips with friends. We had amazing weather for a few days in March and, as well as some lovely food, Dorset beaches, found ourselves exploring the Tarka Trail and visiting the eclectic, Etonville, Bourne Garden – a network of garden paths, blending with art and sculpture.
